The dinner season at the clubs has revived, and during the past few weeks a number of handsome private dinners have been given at the Metropolitan and the Army and Navy.

The answer of the Committee will be a compromise of all of their views, and at least two plans will be recommended. One, as above stated, will be an elevation of the tracks as they at present exist.

The table d'hote dinners at the Army and Navy Club have become quite a popular institution, and there are now about twenty-five who take their dinners regularly at the club.

Lieut. Culver, the secretary of the Army and Navy Club, has been busily engaged for some time past on the book of the club, containing the constitution, by-laws and list of members, that is published each year about this time. The corrected proofs have been sent back to the printers and the new book will probably be issued next week. It is to be a handsome publication and fully up to standard set in previous years. The list of members shows an increase in the past year of 101, with a total resident membership of 292.
